

Mauritian magic

Royal Palm Mauritius has all the right ingredients to make a perfect holiday an unforgettable experience

When planning a holiday to Mauritius, seek the advice of leading luxury travel expert Susie Freeman whose knowledge of the island is virtually boundless thanks to her first-hand experience of Mauritian properties, including the Royal Palm Hotel (one of the finest hotels in the Indian Ocean). Occupying a prime location in the centre of Grande Baie, a small village on the north coast, the Royal Palm successfully combines the traditions of Mauritian hospitality with international standards of comfort. Everything from the beach – which has powder-soft white sand – to the 84 opulent suites with stunning sea views via the impressive facilities radiates luxury and exclusivity and the ratio of three

Clockwise from top: Royal Palm's beach; restaurant Natureaty; Le Bar Plage

outstanding cuisine

staff to every guest ensures service is never less than impeccable. Enjoy complimentary water sports in the turquoise sea, a gym staffed by personal trainers and pampering in the Spa by Clarins – arguably one of the best on the island. Or sign up to a cookery master classes with UK celebrity chef Tom Aikens from 25 to 27 March 2013, including two lessons, three four-course dinners cooked by Tom, plus the opportunity to try some Mauritian Michelin-inspired cuisine.

For more information, please visit susiefreemantravel.com

TATLER READER OFFER

Tatler readers booking a holiday with Susie Freeman Travel can stay half board in a Junior Suite at Royal Palm for seven nights from £2,180 per person – including return economy flights, airport taxes and private car transfers. To book, call Susie Freeman Travel on 01488 668821, email susie@susiefreemantravel.com or visit susiefreemantravel.com