Discover just what the Royal Palm, Mauritius, holds in store with Susie Freeman Travel

When it comes to your summer holiday, it's a godsend to be able to know for certain what those precious two weeks hold. Enter Susie Freeman. With her sixth sense of Mauritius, from its local culture to its luxurious, five- and six-star resorts, your holiday couldn't be in surer hands.

It comes as no surprise to find that among her firm favourites is the Royal Palm, one of the island's most prestigious destinations. Set on the golden sweep of the ultra-fashionable Grand Baie, this member of the Leading Hotels of the World is unquestionably one of the world's finest hotels.

Perhaps it's down to the distinctive service and warmly gracious staff, who manage to be both attentive yet impressively discreet (you don't know they're there until you realise you've left your book behind, or need some extra sun lotion). The result is an amazingly relaxed resort environment.

Fabulous accommodation goes without saying, especially when it's all suite and comes with stunning views of the powder-soft, palm-fringed beach and azure lagoon beyond. But for total decadence, it's hard to beat the recently refurbished, three-level Royal Suite - which has its own hammam in one of the two grand bathrooms and a private infinity-edge pool outside.

Then there are the three restaurants, with fine dining and silver service as standard - even for breakfast - making them all the more memorable. The oh-so-romantic, lagoon-side La Goelette serves world-class cuisine, inspired by fresh, delicately spiced local produce. In contrast, the 28-seat Natureaty Restaurant within the Spa features inventive cuisine to cater for the health conscious.

And then of course there is the exotic, Moroccan-inspired Spa itself, offering a fabulous range of treatments by Clarins, plus anything from Balneotherapy to beauty care. All in all, it makes it easy to predict a supremely relaxing experience.
